

Watch That Title!

(sample texts)

Two pieces written to illustrate the Watch That Title! exercise

(using a 'lightbulb' as the initial spur)...

NOTE. The texts below are presented as poems, but that doesn't mean this exercise is just for poets. All writers can respond, in any way they wish.

LOVE

It conducts electricity.
It's made of glass and steel.
You can see right through it.
If you drop it, it breaks.
You need a ladder to change it.
If you get it cheap, it won't last.
It's designed to fail.
It dies at the worst moment.

THE SOLDIER

He conducts electricity.
He's made of glass and steel.
You can see right through him.
If you drop him, he breaks.
You need a ladder to change him.
If you get him cheap, he won't last.
He's designed to fail.
He dies at the worst moment.
